

My CV Of Failure

I am happy and content, where I am today. There are times, in fact several times when I failed, felt miserable & lost but followed my passion towards those dreams who never let me sleep peacefully.

Inspired by Johannes HausHofer's CV of Failures, I share mine below. I hope people who read my resume understand, that life comes with its own highs & lows. It's important to realize the failures, challenges and overcome. Life is not rosy.

"I failed, failed miserably, once, twice, several times while chasing them. But I never stopped". I was following my dreams with full heart and going through my learning curves.

There have been many, but I am drafting those ones which I remember clearly. In mid 30s you really start forgetting. Here's a list of my disappointments and setbacks which helped me reach where I am today.

My Failures during 10th/Matriculation (As we say so in Orissa)

- I couldn't top in my school during 10th Standard, 1998
- I couldn't study my 12th in Fakir Mohan College

My Failures during 12th/ Plus 2 (As we say so in Orissa)

- I couldn't secure even 60% for that First Division, 2000

Degree programs I did not get into

- I couldn't clear my MBBS- JEE exam, 2001
- Couldn't clear CET- Biotechnology test, 2004
- Couldn't do PhD in JNU, 2006

Fellowships I did not get

- Couldn't clear CSIR NET, 2006

Corporate Life Failures

- Missed my revenue target 3 times, precisely (not in a row though)
 - Couldn't make it to the US yet.
 - Couldn't join the "Smoke gangs". There are literally, in every corporate.

I am not an expert at anything. Nothing!

I am just a learner, kind of "Forever learner to do things just as an expert"
